

Art, unveiled

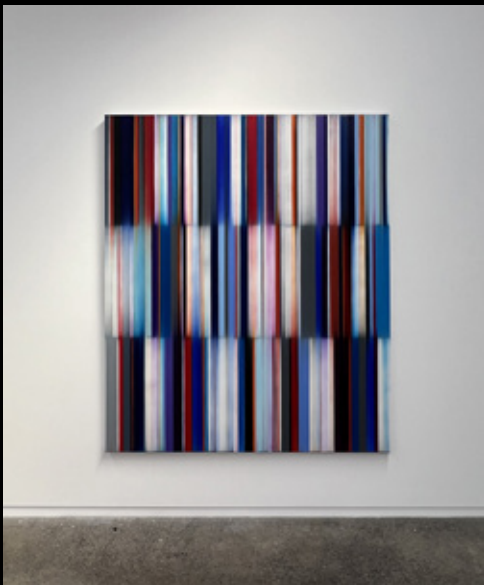

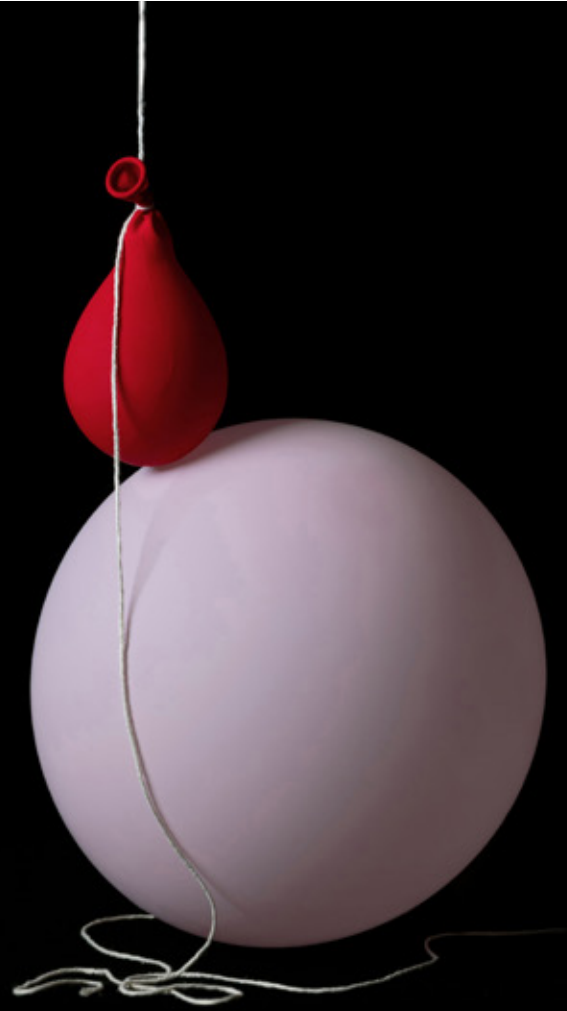

The Aotearoa Art Fair is back this May with an immersive new programme and its largest, most internationally diverse offering to date, showcasing 44 galleries and 150 artists.

Under the leadership of new director, Sue Waymouth, the fair will present a combination of established, prominent galleries alongside a number of newer, cutting-edge galleries.

“During the fair, the city will come alive with art — large-scale sculptures, live performances, and activations — bringing together an incredible community of artists, gallerists, collectors, and the art curious for four days of inspiration and connection.”

Alongside experiencing the dynamic gallery presentations, visitors will be able to engage with the curated Talks Programme, Let’s Talk Art, in which 30 speakers will give 10 talks on art, design, and architecture.

Aotearoa Art Fair will be held at the Viaduct Events Centre, Auckland, 1–4 May.
@aotearoaartfair

Top Pink and Red Balloons, Roberta Thornley, 2025, image courtesy of Melanie Roger Gallery

Right Mother of Arrested Development, Gavin Hurley, 2019, image courtesy of Melanie Roger Gallery

Above Reverb Mix, Mark Francis, 2023, image courtesy of Fox Jensen Gallery

